

New York Times Website Requires Payment to View Article Key Excerpts Provided Below

World Trade Center Collapse Investigation

9/11 Cover-up Document

New York Times* Website Requires Payment to View Article Key Excerpts Provided Below

We were forced to remove our full copy of this article on the investigation into the collapse of the World Trade Center towers by the legal division of the New York Times. You can read more about this below. The article is still available by payment on the Times website. To view the article, you must register as a member (which is free) and pay a small fee by credit card on line in order to be able to view or download the full article. Once registered, you can view an abstract of the article for no cost. First, go to:

<http://select.nytimes.com/gst/abstract.html?res=F40A11FB3E550C768EDDAB0994D9404482>

If you haven't previously signed up as a user, fill in the required information. Once complete, you will see the abstract and have the option to view and download the full article with payment. We provide key excerpts from the article below and instructions on how to locate it free of charge.

Experts Urging Broader Inquiry In Towers' Fall

Saying that the current investigation into how and why the twin towers fell on Sept. 11 is inadequate, some of the nation's leading structural engineers and fire-safety experts are calling for a new, independent and better-financed inquiry that could produce the kinds of conclusions vital for skyscrapers and future buildings nationwide. Experts critical of the current effort...point out that the current team of 20 or so investigators has no subpoena power and little staff support and has even been unable to obtain basic information like detailed blueprints of the buildings that collapsed.

Some structural engineers have said that one serious mistake has already been made...the decision to rapidly recycle the steel columns, beams and trusses that held up the buildings. Interviews with a handful of members of the team, which includes some of the nation's most respected engineers, also uncovered complaints that they had at various times been shackled with bureaucratic restrictions that prevented them from interviewing witnesses, examining the disaster site and requesting crucial information like recorded distress calls to the police and fire departments. Members have been threatened with dismissal for speaking to the press.

Special Note: This article was published by the New York Times on December 25, 2001. Isn't it interesting that this vitally important information should be presented on Christmas day, when the public is least likely to read the newspaper? We originally had the full article posted here for three years, but a lawyer from the Times contacted us in late March of 2006 insisting that we remove the article or face a lawsuit. Note that this request came just days after the 9/11 cover-up and World Trade Center collapse became a very hot topic on CNN and in other major media. Though we have over 30 full New York Times articles posted, this is the only one they asked to be removed.

Even more serious allegations on the World Trade Center collapse are made in one of the nation's top magazines for firefighters. To read this highly revealing article titled "Selling Out the Investigation," click here.

For major coverage given to the collapse of the World Trade Center towers and other aspects of the 9/11 cover-up by CNN and other major media just before we were told to remove the full article:

<http://www.WantToKnow.info/cnn9-11cover-up>

Note: For information on how to find free copies of this and many other news articles on the Internet:

<http://www.WantToKnow.info/findmissinglinks>

9/11 Information Center

World Trade Centers Towers Collapse Investigation

WantToKnow.info is a PEERS empowerment website
